MESSAGE FROM THE MAYOR

It's good to be home in Archer!

Many of you know I was out for the last couple of months having both knees replaced. Both Debra and I want to thank everyone for their well wishes during my recovery.

I am back to work now and have news to share with you.

City Manager John Glanzer and I have been making the rounds in Tallahassee. We are working with several agencies looking for funding options for our sewer system. It has been a challenging task given the budget constraints everyone is working with. We are continuing to ask the agencies to do the right thing and fund our project to the level that all the citizens of Archer can afford to have sewer.

Our Community Center is nearing completion. The air conditioning is removing the humidity so the wood floors can be installed. Commissioner Lopez is planning a gala grand opening event. This is a building from the history of Archer, and I am excited to see it open. Please plan on attending. The date is August 2, 2011 from 2:00 to 4:00.

These are just a couple of highlights from City Hall.

Summer's here, so remember to drink lots of water if you go outside.

Frank Ogborn
Mayor, City of Archer

JOSIAH WALLS, Part Two

A local citizen (who wishes to remain anonymous) sent in this article, which contains additional information about Josiah Walls, the subject of last month's History Corner.

Josiah Walls was born in 1842 to slave parents in Winchester, Virginia. Little is known about his early life. After a short term of Confederate service, he enlisted in the Third Regiment, U.S. Colored Troops in 1863. Transferred to Picolata on the St. Johns River in 1864, he married Helen Ferguson of Newnansville and in 1865 moved to Alachua County after he was mustered out.

After passage of the U.S. Military Reconstruction Act of 1867, Walls entered Florida politics as a delegate to the 1868 State Constitutional Convention, followed by election as a State Representative and later Senator from Alachua County. The 1870 nominee of the Republican Party for Florida's only seat in the U.S. House of Representatives, Walls defeated Silas Niblack after a bitter contest riddled with charges of fraud and intimidation. Josiah T. Walls thus became the state's first black congressman. Although unseated by the House near the end of his term, Walls was re-elected in 1872. In another contested election in 1874, Walls defeated J. J. Finley, a former Confederate general, but, in 1876, was again removed from office. Walls was elected to the Florida Senate that year.

After 1879, Josiah Walls concentrated on his farming activities, first acquiring land near Newnansville in 1868, but in 1870 he moved to Gainesville. In 1871 Walls bought the western half of the block now bounded by University Avenue and NW 12th Street on the west. In 1873 he purchased a 1,117 acre plantation on the west edge of Paynes Prairie. In that year he acquired the weekly newspaper, The New Era, and was admitted to the Florida Bar.

Remaining active in local politics, Walls served at various times as Mayor of Gainesville, board member of Public Instruction and County Commissioner. Josiah was a highly successful and prosperous farmer through the 1880's until he suffered financial ruin as a result of the severe freeze of the winter of 1894-95. He moved to Tallahassee to become the farm director at the school that is now Florida A and M University. He died in Tallahassee in 1905 at the age of 63.
